"Having worked with Corporate Technologies Group for over 5 years, we have experienced first-hand how CTG works as a business and as a business partner. CTG has patiently worked with us to build a relationship, understand our needs, and provide solutions to our problems as opposed to selling products and services.

Having a responsive, single-point of contact for our telecom needs has been tremendous, especially when it comes to new services, adds, changes, and repairs for each of our locations across 28 states. Ever since CTG began helping manage our telecom needs, we have been able to refocus valuable internal resources we previously dedicated to those responsibilities."

"Corporate Technologies Group maintained 100% communication with us through every step of our hosted phone project, from start to finish (and after)! Through each stage of the project, CTG facilitated and deployed all aspects that we needed for each of our locations to a "T."

Talk to CTG and their customers if you want a better understanding of what they can help you do as your technology partner. From the start, we were presented with several options to meet our goal and the best option wasn't the cheapest or the most expensive... it was the one that CTG put emphasis on that met all of our requirements without breaking the bank."

"Since we moved our company to hosted phone services, we have more uniformity and standardization of software, hardware and services across our company platform. We were faced with replacing aged hardware for 3 out of our 7 locations.

Many of the locations lacked standard features offered in today's communication world. Not only did CTG find the right solution for our company, but they also manage ongoing support for us. CTG assisted and guided us in our project implementations and managed other vendors, including difficult communication vendors (phone utility providers especially). CTG's Client Support Group is customer centric and makes sure that any issues we experience are fixed. They are a single point of contact for us whenever we require assistance."

"Our organization includes a corporate office and thirteen satellite facilities, which we have relocated on several occasions. CTG was instrumental in assisting me locate the best carrier, as well as supporting my onsite efforts in installing the equipment and circuits needed to connect our new facilities with our corporate office.

Corporate Technologies Group offers a more personalized 1-on-1 approach to supporting our needs than some firms I have worked with. It is rare to deal with a firm where the owner is actively involved in the projects including meetings, phone calls, and follow-ups. Let CTG handle a single project for your company, and you'll know that CTG has the best people in place to offer the professional and courteous service and support needed to implement the services you require."

"Since starting to work with CTG, I think the communication is the best part about them. Instead of getting a comprehensive quote myself for a service or needing to report an outage, CTG can take care of this for me.

They are like a dog with a bone and their response time is the best! I've worked with other IT firms in the past that over promised and under delivered, but CTG hasn't been like that. They have always been upfront about what they can deliver. How would you like to never have to deal with a carrier again? CTG can make that dream a reality, over and over again."

"I have been with McGean for 24 years, and the company was already working with Brett Harney before I came on board. When he started Corporate technologies Group, there was no question, we wanted to work with them. I think that the biggest benefit I have received since I started working with CTG is that I work with the same people. There is very little turnover, and I don't have to explain past projects to a new person because the support representatives have worked through them all.

Working with them is like working with your coworkers/friends. The best trait of CTG is honesty. If they don't know the answer they will find it out. They stand behind the customer and fight for what is right."

"I feel a personal connection with Corporate Technologies Group. They have a small business feel with a high level of availability. Dealing with large telecom monopolies can be complex and they help cut through the red tape. While working with CTG, they have helped save us quite a bit of money while maintaining vendor quality and have been instrumental in rate negotiations across all our regions. I would recommend using CTG for help with managing your telecom contracts, as they add value in saving you time and money. They are also organized and experienced. It's nice to have an extra set of eyes, especially when you make a lot of changes day in and day out. They are reasonable, and the value added by them is evident."

"CTG made our transition from the old phone provider to the new phone provider the smoothest phone transition I've ever been a part of. The transition was so quick that actually removing the old physical phones and replacing them took longer than the switch. CTG does a lot of legwork in the background to make the transition seems easy to us. They had a full blown plan for how this would work and they stuck to it. The project was communicated pretty well, and it was clear CTG knew more about the process than the provider we were working with anyways. We have had very few issues, and even if we do, CTG is quick to provide assistance. By working with CTG, I can tell you that the grass turned out to be pretty green on my side."
